Two popular lineup card formats will be shown.

On the left - a popular format when teams print their own lineup cards, with a separate roster listed at the bottom.

On the right - a common format when teams use generic lineup cards such as you would find at Academy, with the roster combined with the lineup. It's being shown in the optimal format, where coaches list their "subs" (roster) on the left. Unfortunately, sometimes you will be presented this lineup with the subs listed on the top right, making space for writing a bit tight. In this case, you might want to repurpose empty slots below.

ROSTER ZONE

The Layout of the SSL System

Your card will be divided into two zones:

- Game Zone
- Roster Zone

The Game Zone will always reflect the current, reported, reality of who is IN THE GAME.

When you get this, you understand the whole system.

1. Circles in the Game Zone indicate exits.

A uncircled number in the Game Zone is currently in the game, and thus, there should only be one uncircled number per slot in the game zone.

2. Circles in the Roster Zone indicate entries.

An uncircled number in the Roster Zone has not entered the game.

3. X is used for the special case of when the DP/Flex spot is "collapsed" by the Flex playing offense for the DP, and the number "in the game" goes from 10 to 9.

Pre-Game Work:

(LEFT) For lineup cards that use a separate roster, go ahead and circle all the starters in the roster to indicate their entry into the game.

Circles in the Roster Zone indicate entry.

(RIGHT) For combined lineup/rosters, do not do this. Because starters are already separated from potential subs, this works just fine. Remember that circles in the Game Zone indicate exits, not entries.

Circles in the Roster Zone indicate Entry

The coach may have made their own marks for players, but we're hopefully writing in a different color, and we're going to adapt our system accordingly.

Let's start easy with Courtesy Runners.

When a coach calls out something like:

"44 to courtesy run for the pitcher"

We first look to see if #44 has entered the game by seeing if her number is circled in the roster zone.

Circles in the Roster Zone indicate entries.

She is not circled, so we know she hasn't entered previously.

We also know she hasn't previously run because there's no other notation. The next slide will show what notation we make every time a player courtesy runs.

Notating Courtesy Runners:

Write "P" (Pitcher) or "C" (Catcher) next to the player in the Roster Zone to indicate who she is courtesy running for.

Next to the P or C you just wrote, write the inning.

Circle what you just wrote.

Here's how we would notate "#44 to courtesy run for the pitcher," in the 3rd inning.

Catching Courtesy Runner Mistakes:

Let's say the coach later calls out "44 to courtesy run for the catcher."

We would first look to see if #44 is not circled in the Roster Zone. She is not. Therefore, she has not entered the game, the first step of eligibility.

However, we do have a previous courtesy run in the Roster Zone, circled, as a reminder that her courtesy running is now restricted to the pitcher.

We tell the coach, "44 ran for the pitcher in the 3rd inning. She can only courtesy run for the pitcher."

Substitutions - Exits:

To record an exit, we circle the player in the Game Zone.

Substitutions - Entries:

To record an entry, first check the status of the player by looking in the Roster Zone, which tracks entries.

Uncircled = The substitute has not previously entered into the game and is free to enter into any slot. Indicate her entry by circling her in the Roster Zone.

○ = Circled indicates she has entered previously, so you must find her in the Game Zone and make sure she's going into the same position. Indicate her entry by writing her number in the Game Zone.

⊗ = If she is circled and double slashed, she is "burnt" and may not enter.

Coach Says:
"Substitute 10 for 12"

First, we check in the Roster Zone to make sure that #10 is free to enter. (Not shown on this slide, she was uncircled, so she's free to enter into any position.)

We circle #10 in the Roster Zone and write her number by #12 in the Game Zone.

Finish the sub notation by circling 12 in the Game Zone, indicating she has exited the game.

Feature:

If two numbers are uncircled in the same lineup slot, that would indicate two players currently playing in the same spot, so either we forgot to notate someone's exit, or we have an unreported or illegal substitute somewhere.

After performing the usual checks, we see that this is legal so:

Circle #22 in the Roster Zone to indicate her entry

Write #22 in the Game Zone

Circle #12 in the Game Zone to indicate her exit.

When notating #12's exit, look in the Game Zone and confirm that #12 has exited twice (two circles), and update the Roster Zone by double slashing the circle with an X. She has left the game and cannot re-enter.

If using the combined lineup/roster, double slash the first time her number was listed, as seen on the right.

Everything you've learned thus far will work the same when teams are batting a straight 9, use EPs, Roster Batting, etc.

Now let's look at the special case of when teams utilize the DP/Flex option.

Special Case: Flex for DP

If the Flex plays offense for the DP, the DP has left the game and the batting lineup has changed. It must be tracked, but the Flex is not entering; only the DP is exiting.

Key Concept:
We use an X plus her jersey number to indicate the Flex playing offense in the DP slot.

Coach Says:

"Flex to bat for the DP"

- Write X23 in the DP slot to indicate the Flex moving into the batting order, and the total number of players changing from 10 to 9.

- Circle #33 (the DP) to track her exit from the game.

NOTE: This is the only time you should see the same number uncircled twice in the Game Zone. Do not circle #23 in the Flex spot because she did not exit the game.

Coach Says:
"Re-enter the DP"

This request indicates that the coach wants to re-enter #33 as the DP and take #23 (the Flex) out of the batting order, but leave her in the game.

Circle X23 to indicate that the Flex has left the batting order but not left the game. (This is why we use the X.)

Write #33 back into the Game Zone which notates her re-entry.

Key Concepts:

An uncircled "X" in the Game Zone indicates the DP/Flex has collapsed and the team is playing with 9 players.

When the last "X" has been circled, this indicates the DP/Flex is back on, and the team is playing with 10 players.

"The DP is playing defense for the Flex"

As required by rule, the coach will definitely report to you when the the DP is playing defense for the Flex, and the Flex has therefor left the game.

When the Flex is no longer playing defense, this is an exit, and we notate it like any other exit - by circling her number in the Game Zone. No other notation is necessary.

Key Concept: All numbers circled in the Flex slot means that the DP/Flex has collapsed and there are 9 players.

"Re-enter 23 as the Flex"

Let's see how the system works for bringing the Flex back in.

Simply write #23 back into the Game Zone.

No one has left the game, so no other notation is necessary.

We went from 9 to 10 in the game.
